As a reminder, all plants brought in for the show table should be free of pests and diseases. Take some time to stake and clean the leaves of your plants, this allows for better presentation. Also, please do not bring newly-purchased plants for the show table.

The show table is an outlet for members to share the great job they have done in growing and flowering their orchids; therefore, please respect the unwritten rule of owning and growing an orchid for a minimum of 6 months.

OUR APRIL 2018 SPEAKER

Featuring Daryl Venables

My father still teases me to this day that he always knew I would end up in horticulture partly because at the age of three they had to build a fence around the vegetable garden to keep me out. Apparently I was obsessed with pulling up all the carrots to make sure they were growing okay. At the age of 7 my father took me to an orchid show as he needed to meet with a colleague who was working the show, and it was not love at first sight, more like love at first sniff! Before we had even entered the main hall, this smell hit me, I remember it as if it were yesterday, it was Dendrobium kingianum and is still one of my all time favorite orchids. When we walked through the main entrance to the show and I saw my first orchids, it changed my world forever. My father thought it would be a passing phase (just like the tropical fish, tortoises, pigeons, canaries and yes, there was even a rock collection phase!), but 30 years later, orchids are still a huge part of my life.

I have grown just about every orchid you could imagine, but it was not until I encountered Tolumnias that I knew immediately what I wanted to focus on. The only problem was, in Africa there were only 2 Tolumnias in circulation 30 years ago, so what was a young orchid nut to do..... bug his parents mercilessly until they agreed to help him import some new ones from Thailand of course! It took me a year to save up enough pocket money to meet the minimum order requirements, but the order was placed and I was delighted when a box of plants arrived. Most were in spike and when they started to bloom I could not believe the variety of colors and patterns. Fast forward to today, I have approximately 1,500 breeding plants which I have collected from all over the world and very recently started breeding on a much larger scale than before. I got tired of talking to myself about

I look forward to sharing my Tolumnia passion with you and sharing all the tips and tricks I have learnt about this wonderful genus over the past 30 years.

Our March speaker Thomas Bajza

The Giant World of Miniature Orchids & How to Grow Cool Growers in Florida

By Gigi Louis

Tomas delighted us with his talk and slide show on miniature orchids. If you are a member of the Facebook group Florida Orchid Growing (FOG), then you are already familiar with Tomas' minis – and his amazing photography of the blooms.

Tomas explained how to grow micro and miniature orchids indoors in a simple set up using a glass orb or vase and live moss, which provides humidity for the plant. When grown this way, the plants do not require frequent watering – perhaps every two to three days – because the live moss keeps the humidity levels high.

The plants may be grown on a windowsill, near a glass door or under lights. If growing under lights, Tomas recommends aquarium lights because they are waterproof. Fans are generally not needed unless you are growing in a tall vase then any inexpensive fan may be used to provide additional air circulation.

Warm-growing plants may be grown outdoors on a patio or balcony. Watering is easy using a pump sprayer. If your particular species are fussy about water quality, rain or RO (reverse-osmosis) water should be used.

Cool-growing species may be grown in a vivarium or even a repurposed wine cooler! In the alternative, they may be kept indoors all summer and then moved outdoors in the cooler months. Cold fronts are actually beneficial to the cool growers and will prompt them to bloom.

ICU for Miniatures

When ordering plants from international vendors, be aware that small plants do not travel as well as standard orchids. They will require a little TLC when they arrive. Be aware that they may lose all of their leaves!

Create an ICU in a container or jar using live moss. Simply put the plant inside and close it up until the plant recovers from its long journey.

Mounting Materials

- Cholla wood (choy-a) – the skeleton of the cholla cactus which may be found at shops that sell aquarium or reptile supplies.
- Cork plaques Cork bark – available from some orchid vendors by the pound or in quantity from Maryland Cork,
- Hygroton – a textured, wicking cloth that may be stuffed with foam to make a mounting tube. Available from Glass Box Tropicals and other online vendors

Feeding

Tomas feeds his plants with MagiCal (magnesium and calcium), Sugar Daddy (magnesium and Sulphur), Grow More (seaweed extract), RepotMe Feed Me (MSU formula fertilizer) and Dynagrow Orchid Pro 7-8-6.

Tomas provides full service orchid care including simple inside growing setups, in-home care and repotting and mounting services in addition to miniature and rare orchid sales. He may be reached at tommy.bajza@yahoo.com.
